BACKGROUND

On 31st October 1917, the outcome of the First World War was anything but clear. The losses at Gallipoli, setbacks on the Western Front and failures in the First and Second Battles of Gaza were the backdrop to the Battle of Beersheba. And so it was on this day that the ANZAC Light Horse gathered behind a ridge south-east of the city and moved off at a trot. Surprise and speed were their one chance.

Facing sustained enemy fire, the mounted infantry rode under the Turkish guns and cleared the trenches in close combat. Though outnumbered, the audacity of the surprise attack carried them through. The capture of Be'er Sheva was complete by nightfall, and the precious wells of the town were secured. It was the success and desperation of the Charge, by mounted infantry, not cavalry - that earned it an immortal place in Australian history. Importantly, on the same day, the British Government in London approved the Balfour Declaration setting off a chain of events that would eventually lead to the resurrection and re-establishment of the modern state of Israel in 1948, after almost 2,000 years of Jewish exile. In the cemetery at Beersheba, 1241 Commonwealth soldiers are buried. Men who sacrificed their lives in service of their country, and expressed values of the highest order: honor, courage, loyalty and duty.
